> Of What is Essential to the Successful Treatment of Catarh, Asthma, and Bronchitis -Reporter Convinced There Is None Like Dr. Riegel's Treatment.

A representative of the press called on Dr. the officials held an investigation as to the in the officials held an investigation as to the of the doctor's method and the instruments in and out running of the borses Fagin and used in his treatment of catarrh, asthma, and Riegel vesterday to learn something, if he could, Hiume. Owner Frank Weir disclaimed any broughttis, in which diseases the doctor is a responsibility, and agreed hereafter not to leading specialist, and it is well known that he enter either of these unreliable racers. He has cured many prominent people in this city. When asked concerning his method of treatment, he said: "There are four essential requisites in the treatment of estacris, asthma, bronchitts and kindred diseases that must be strictly followed in order to affect a cure. They are— "First-Application must be made without exusing pain or irritation. "Second-Every portion of the diseased sur-faces within the masal, posterior-masal cavaties and throat must be treated.

"Third-Sufficient force must be exerted to remove all diseased secretions from the diseased

Fourth-The instruments for making appli-

"Fourth—The instruments for making application must be so constructed that the solution can be applied in a warm condition.

"Code applied in a warm condition should be made so warm that the patient will be exassions of all the warm spray cleanses more quickly and more thereughty in the more agreeable, and for more likely to reduce inflammation.

Every physician who has had only a few years experience in the treatment of catarrix, ashma, and breachitis, should see the necessity of avoiding everything that induces irritation.

"If either the means by which the remedy is applied, or the remedy itself, causes irritation, its use should be immediately discontinued.

"No doubt a remedy would frequently prace periods at were it not for the irritation caused by the reaght manner of applying it. It is evident that every part of the diseased mannerance with not be conclined, and yet almost every instrument or apparatus used by the greating fractioner, and even those used by the greating fractioner, and even those used by the greating for the decause of the name and throat, fall in short of this object.

"Stray producers that trans there yet mention in the woole of the diseased surfaces, and the only one that I thank possess the four requisite above mentioned, are the spray producers known as the 'Rumboll', invented by It's Thomas Burnbold, of St. Louis, and the levithies, invented by the Allen be villules, of Toleda, Ohio, the difference hetween the two being the universal tip of the latter invention.

"With these instruments, the only once i now use, for I have discurded all other means as entirely worthless, it can reach every portion of visable muchous frombrane, but they do this to the surfaces and cashies that cannot be viewed during life, and these unemone leasily with the surfaces and contr is not equaled by any known means.

"Here are two cuts showing the different directions of the aprays when used for cleansing and treating catarrh and throat diseases.

"Fig. 1. Antero-posterior section of the head, showing the combined directions of the spray-producers in the local treatment of the hasal and posterior-meal cavities.

"Fig. 2 shows the combined directions of the spray-producers when used in the treatment of the diseases of the throat, tousilitis, sore throat, and all other diseases of the throat and vocal cords. The spray-producers are the grandest invention ever made. As I told you before, I have used all neams for treating extern and throat diseases, and before I adopted these spray-producers I had no success, now I have no radiuses.

"I have made it a rule for the last ten years to give free trial treatments to every one who applies in person at my office, and it seldom happens that a person troubled with any of these diseases does not come back to be cured. I give a guarantee to every person I take for treatment. Another thing, iguarantee to all patients taken, that if I cannot rolleve them of most of their prominent and disagreeable symptoms in from one to two weeks, I will refund all money paid.
